Spell Checker is a widget for Microsoft Windows that has been designed to make your life easier when it comes to typing on the Internet. You can use the program to check your text in any web page and make sure that you're not typing nonsense. After copying the text, the program will suggest alternatives for the misspelled words. Spell Checker can also check the spelling of a document or a file. If the text is in an email message or the body of an Internet page, you can use the program to check it. Spell Checker allows you to replace the misspelled words or select all of them.

Moreover, you can easily choose any alternative you prefer. The widget is not very complex and its overall functionality is quite limited. Nevertheless, the program is convenient to use, thanks to its intuitive and simple interface.

Spelling Checker Review: Welcome to Spell Checker. This is a free Windows widget that allows you to check the spelling of your text in any web page and makes sure that you are not typing nonsense. It's a very simple tool, but it is very efficient. The program comes with a small interface and clean layout. You can choose between two different ways of using it. The first is the direct way. You can type the text directly into the interface, after which you press the button and wait a few seconds. You will then be prompted to select one of the options available in the widget, such as the option to automatically fill in your name, address or phone number. The second option is the paste option. You can paste the text you want to check into the frame. Once you click on the button, the program will start offering you several alternative spellings for the words you have pasted. Once you have selected a word, you can click on it to replace it with the correct spelling, or you can simply select all the words with the checkbox to copy them into the clipboard. The program is very limited. It is not possible to check the spelling of a word without opening a web page.

If you want to check an email or a document, you must open it in your browser. The program can only check the spelling of text that is written on a web page. In addition, there are very few options. The user interface is very small, which makes it uncomfortable for the user. On the plus side, the program is very efficient and it doesn't take much space on your desktop

Spell Checker is a small gadget that can be quite useful to have around. The program has a very simple interface and clean layout and should be easy to use by all types of users. As mentioned, the widget can help you check all text. You can either write the text directly into the frame or copy/paste the words into the interface. Once the text is typed in, you must simply press the button on the interface and wait a few seconds before the program starts suggesting alternatives for the misspelled words. Clicking on any of the entries immediately replaces the words. The program comes with a small interface that can be moved to any area of the screen, which means that it's possible to pick the least inconvenient spot for you. The frame cannot be resized so you'll have to do with the default settings. The context menu only includes a few basic options regarding the text. Thus, you may undo the last thing you typed, cut, copy or paste the text, select all the words or delete it entirely. All in all, Spell Checker is a nice widget that is very easy to use. Inexperienced individuals should find it easy to handle, thanks to the intuitive layout and its overall simplicity.
