A border fort to the north of the Red River Dam, it is a border fort. Assigned one berserker that turns out to be from the same town. He had talked with the previous captain who went missing. He decided to join you and has several followers already. Three people are investigating the town the orcs were spotted in, which is in a swamp south of the fort. When not in the marshland, it is worked by a rice farming. You make your way into the town. (Resources: One dwarf familiar, one wizard, one berserker, 1 orc ally.) You make your way into town, killing and looting as you go. You take a horde of each type of weapon and armor. At the end of the day you call in to the fort and drop off the gear you gathered. They reward you. When you get back you hear from your allies that there is a new captain in town. You go down to hear his plans. He has a plan to double the watch. He knows that the orcs are much more likely to attack now since they think the watch is gone. You think this is a good idea. The next morning at dawn you head to town and take in the previous captain. His fate is unknown. You also take in the new captain. You make your way back through town on your way back to the fort. You encounter an orc patrol and kill them all in the marshlands. Make sure you keep the loot they drop. On your way back to the fort you encounter a fey creature that wants to help you. He has mystical tools with which to protect you and make you stronger. “Bah, you think you can have an army and not worry about a bureaucracy? Ha, you’re too stupid to be an army!”. – Wulfgar

Somervels autumn rains lasted longer than usual, and the resulting winter floods impacted more than expected. Some distant pale-forts haven't been heard from in months, being cut off by the linking of frozen rice paddies, flood meadows, leas usually inhabited by cattle, and rivers that run through Somervels territory. Parties are charged with taking supplies to these border posts and bringing anyone severely injured home. Somervels pale-forts are like beaver lodges; earthen mounds on islands in the marshlands. Each covers a wide area, is surrounded by a

Developer: A-13 Sega 2014 Genre: Action-RPG Platform: PlayStation 4 (PS4), PS Vita Release Date: May 17th, 2014 Vision: MMORPG-like Active Time: TV Series/OVA Stylistic Elements: Post-apocalyptic Sci-Fi Visual Features: Most playable characters Control: D-pad, face buttons Gamepads Touch screen Compatible: PS4, PS Vita Limited: Playstation 4 (No PS Vita version) PlayStation Network Price: $54.99 at current exchange rates and quantities ESRB Mature for Violence and Language From the developer who brought you Sword Art Online and the Ace Attorney series comes Lost Song, a new action-RPG from A-13. Lost Song reunites with many of the same development staff from Sword Art Online, including Akihiko Yoshida and Masashi Kishimoto of the Ace Attorney series. With a new 3D character model put into place for the Lost Song release, the original Gear anime is set to begin a new life as a TV miniseries. The story features high school student Tenryū Hyōbu, the son of a schoolteacher, Kureha Hyōbu. He encounters the evil corporation Une Kaga Corporation and finds himself caught up with the mysterious girl Ai. As the battle progresses he discovers a powerful sword as a way to help him fight for his life. In between the battles you spend time viewing other users' fights in the battle arena, checking out other items like weapon development and customization, and engaging in PVP fights with other users in the arena. These interspersed battles keep the player moving forward throughout the game. "Test Mode" is also available, where new players can join the fray, defeating enemies and gaining loot to help them improve their skills. Once the Test Mode is over the next fights will begin with the standard challenge system and the PVP system is started. A full character creation system also makes it easy to play as a different character. Story (from the developers) It's been three years since I was ten years old. Tenryū was the new kid in class back then. He was calm when he first started, but then it became apparent that he was just hiding some big scars on the inside. He had a strong resistance to Sleep physiology and cardiovascular status in heart failure patients on home or institutional care. This study was designed to assess whether there were differences in various aspects of cardiac and autonomic function between patients with heart failure (HF) with home or institutional care and patients with compensated HF. In addition, we assessed whether the degree of somatic and mental dysfunction was related to the physical activity and sleep quality among patients with HF. In this study, 79 compensated HF patients who were living at home (n = 30) or in an institution (n = 49) were included. These HF patients were divided into three groups according to the care regimen: those who received daily care at home (HFC, n = 30), daily care at an institution (IFC, n = 49), and daily care by home health care (HHC, n = 30). On day 1, day 7, and day 14, sleep quality, activity, and somatic and mental dysfunction were assessed by questionnaire. Heart rate variability (HRV) was evaluated at rest and during deep breathing, and carotid baroreceptor sensitivity (BRS) was determined. Physical activity, sleep quality, and somatic and mental dysfunction were reduced in IFC and HHC patients compared with HFC patients. In contrast, HRV during deep breathing and carotid BRS did not differ. The degree of somatic and mental dysfunction was correlated with physical activity ( $r = -0.67$ ,  $P = 0.02$ ), and sleep quality ( $r = -0.70$ ,  $P = 0.01$ ). Our findings indicate that the incidence of somatic and mental dysfunction was greater in HF patients who receive daily care at an institution than in those receiving home care. Reduced physical activity and poor sleep quality may both play a role in this.Q:
